

Frontline Health & Safety Training

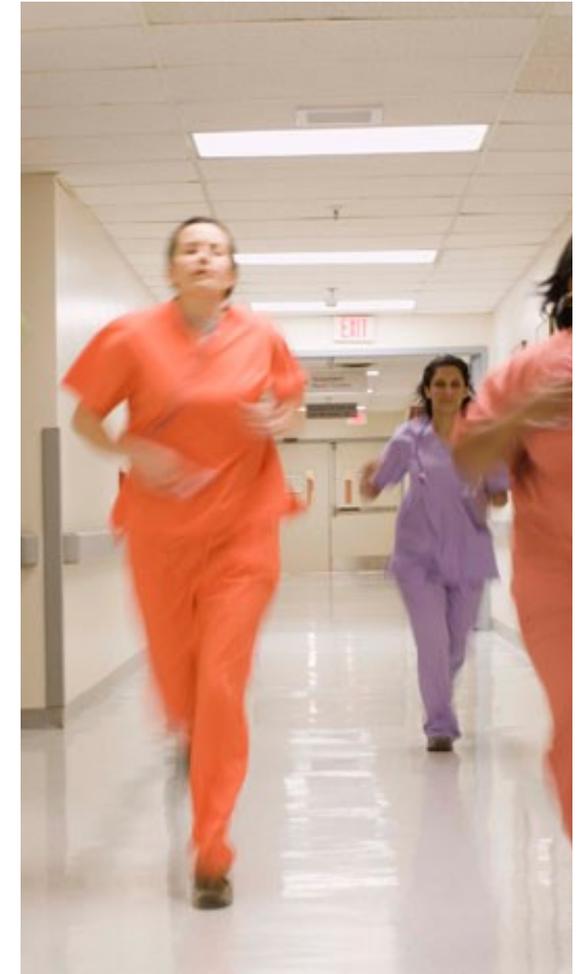

Qualified Instruction

Taught by former police Use of Force instructor and martial arts expert Mike Csoke, students gain the confidence and skills to respond to any crisis situation.

His extensive experience as a police instructor and member of the SWAT and Crisis Outreach and Support Team (COAST), Mike empowers students with the knowledge and practical skills to protect themselves.

Students receive both in-class academic theory instruction and hands-on scenario training that focuses on early recognition of potential threats, de-escalation techniques and crisis management.

Healthcare Employee
Personal Safety Awareness

The Reality

Healthcare workers are considered to be at one of the highest risks of getting attacked at work. From physical assaults, including being punched, kicked and bitten to assaults involving weapons, such as needles, furniture or common hospital equipment. The risk to healthcare workers is real.

A tragic incident of workplace violence not only causes physical harm, but it can have a devastating mental and emotional impact on employees, their families and co-workers.

Employers Responsibility

Violence in not part of the job.

Under the Occupational Health & Safety Act (R.S.O 1990) and Bill 168, employers have a legal responsibility to provide all staff with appropriate safety education and workplace violence training.

Knowledge is Power

Although online learning can provide basic information, simply watching a video does not qualify as adequate training. Designed specifically for healthcare workers, this one-day personal safety seminar includes both in-class education and hands-on, practical training for:

- Nurses
- Personal Support Workers (PSW)
- Long-Term Care Support Staff
- Social Workers
- Family Caregivers

A Strong Foundation

All of our instructors are highly-experienced in crisis intervention and the application of defensive techniques that work. As the leader in workplace safety and security education, Canadian Security Training is committed to providing healthcare organizations with effective crisis intervention strategies.

Violence Prevention

Prevention and effective de-escalation relies on early recognition of critical incidents.

Employees and supervisors need to be able to recognize the warning signs and be given the skills to respond to potential threats.

Strategies For Survival

When healthcare workers go to work they don't expect to be involved in a physical confrontation. However, the reality is that incidents of workplace violence in healthcare are on the rise.

Through hands-on, one-on-one instruction, the Healthcare Employee Safety Awareness training seminar provides employees with real-life scenario training that focuses on early recognition of potential threats, de-escalation techniques and crisis management strategies.

Ultimately, giving employees the knowledge and practical skills to confidently respond to a critical incident of workplace violence.

It could happen anywhere.
